The smell of FOMO [fear of missing out]

ASX 200 surges to largest monthly gain on record. US corporate earnings, speculation over continued central bank support, window dressing and virus treatment hopes combine to boost global equities. Despite the threat posed to the global economy and corporate earnings from disruptions caused by the coronavirus, the Head of Research at Pepperstone, Mr Weston, said investors are choosing instead to focus on the prospect of further central bank support. Helped by a string of robust US corporate results before the start of trade, local shares opened higher and just kept on going, adding to gains as the session progressed. The energy sector once again led the charge, supported by another mind-boggling rally in crude oil futures in Asia which helped to erase all the losses seen earlier in the week. Oil Search, Santos, Origin Energy and Caltex Australia all climbed more than 8 per cent, helping the energy sector finish up by the same amount. "Liquidity is all conquering," he said.
