Economic Insights

A visual guide to the economic impact

The coronavirus outbreak has left businesses around the world counting the costs. The link below leads to a selection of maps and charts to help to understand the economic impact of the virus so far. Big shifts in stock markets, where shares in companies are bought and sold, can affect the value of pensions or individual savings accounts (ISAs). The FTSE, Dow Jones Industrial Average and the Nikkei have all seen huge falls since the outbreak began on the 31st of December. The Dow and the FTSE saw their biggest quarterly drops in the first three months of the year since 1987. Investors fear the spread of the coronavirus will destroy economic growth and that government action may not be enough to stop the decline. In response, central banks in many countries, including the United Kingdom, slashed interest rates. That should, in theory, make borrowing cheaper and encourage spending to boost the economy.

Latest updates:

- Queensland residents will be allowed to visit house holds in groups of five from Sunday. NSW Premier Gladys Berejiklian has said there will be no changes to restrictions in the state before next week.
- The ACT will return children to schools from May 18th, leaving Victoria and Tasmania as the only places in the country without a plan to bring students back into the classroom.
- Commonwealth Bank has closed 114 branches across the nation to deal with staffing needs elsewhere and a drop in patronage during the COVID-19 pandemic. The “temporary” closures mean about 500 staff are being redeployed to call centres and online operations to help meet demand from people seeking financial assistance.

World Situation

Bali

Many domestic flights in Indonesia are banned, while foreign nationals could potentially legally travel internally for the purpose of onward travel out of Indonesia but Denpasar airport is closed. The Government announcement that all commercial passenger traffic by air, sea and rail STOPPED until 01 June. Many are still stranded in Bali.
